

ORDER REIGNS.

Quiet Sunday in the Metropolis.

SERVICES AT THE CATHOLIC CHURCHES.

All Catholics Admonished by Their Clergy to Go to Work and Avoid Crowds.

Sermons by the Rev. Fathers Ferrall, Clowry, McNulty, Nicot, Mooney, Donnelly, Malone and Quarey.

LETTER FROM MR. JAMES T. BRADY.

More New York Regiments Returned Home.

Interesting Map of the City on Eighth Page.

Scenes of the Recent Excitement and Conflicts.

Yesterday was a quiet Sunday. The various wards were as peaceful as ever, and there was not the slightest exhibition of disorder growing out of the drafting excitement. Thousands of people visited the scenes of the late conflicts between the military and populace, and the conversation of all classes centered upon the conscription. The military did not make their appearance at all in the vicinity of the disturbance, and the police patrolled their beats pretty much as formerly. Up to the hour of our going to press this morning everything was in a state of profound tranquility from the Battery to Harlem.

ST. BRIDGET'S CHURCH.

FATHER THOMAS J. MOONEY'S APPEAL TO HIS CONGREGATION.

After morning service, Rev. Father Thomas J. Mooney proceeded to address the congregation from a text designed to show that Christians are considered as stewards of the most important in their hands, and that it is their duty to take care of that soul and the body is inalienable, with a view to the presenting of it at the judgment seat on high in the best of all acceptable forms. In concluding his remarks Father M. spoke as follows:—

But I have to refer to certain circumstances in which we are all more or less concerned, and which affect our feelings, as they ought to, to a greater or less degree. There recently burst upon us a mighty and devastating storm—a storm in which men were brought in direct conflict with each other. For reason of the great increase which I feel in your souls, and the care which by Almighty God himself, and that it is their duty to take care of that soul and the body is inalienable, with a view to the presenting of it at the judgment seat on high in the best of all acceptable forms. In concluding his remarks Father M. spoke as follows:—

But I have to refer to certain circumstances in which we are all more or less concerned, and which affect our feelings, as they ought to, to a greater or less degree. There recently burst upon us a mighty and devastating storm—a storm in which men were brought in direct conflict with each other. For reason of the great increase which I feel in your souls, and the care which by Almighty God himself, and that it is their duty to take care of that soul and the body is inalienable, with a view to the presenting of it at the judgment seat on high in the best of all acceptable forms. In concluding his remarks Father M. spoke as follows:—

ST. MARY'S CHURCH.

ADDRESS BY REV. FATHER FERRALL.

St. Mary's Catholic church, corner of Grand and Ridge streets, was densely crowded yesterday morning. High mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Ferrall, who afterwards read a portion of the fourth chapter of St. Paul's Epistle to the Corinthians, in which St. Paul, addressing the persecuted Christians to practice moderation and charity. The reverend gentleman then proceeded to deliver a short extemporary address to his congregation, and after explaining how the advice of St. Paul might be found applicable to their own case at the present time, he said it ever was and ever will be the lot of the true church to suffer persecution. This had been besought to it by its Divine founder, who on the cross shed His precious blood and diffused the truth of Christianity to the world. The cross must be borne by all who claim to be its true disciples, and it is not in vain that they are called to follow in the footsteps of their Lord. He then alluded to the persecutions of the early Christians, and to the persecutions of the present time, and said that the church of the future must be able to stand the test of persecution. He then alluded to the persecutions of the present time, and to the persecutions of the future, and said that the church of the future must be able to stand the test of persecution. He then alluded to the persecutions of the present time, and to the persecutions of the future, and said that the church of the future must be able to stand the test of persecution.

ST. MICHAEL'S ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.

THE REVEREND FATHER DONNELLY'S ADDRESS UPON THE NEARBY DENOUNCED—SILENT AND TRUE MARTYR.

In this church services were preached by the Rev. A. J. Donnelly, the pastor, having pointed out to the members of the church the various scenes of the late conflicts between the military and populace, and the conversation of all classes centered upon the conscription. The military did not make their appearance at all in the vicinity of the disturbance, and the police patrolled their beats pretty much as formerly. Up to the hour of our going to press this morning everything was in a state of profound tranquility from the Battery to Harlem.

ST. MICHAEL'S ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.

THE REVEREND FATHER DONNELLY'S ADDRESS UPON THE NEARBY DENOUNCED—SILENT AND TRUE MARTYR.

In this church services were preached by the Rev. A. J. Donnelly, the pastor, having pointed out to the members of the church the various scenes of the late conflicts between the military and populace, and the conversation of all classes centered upon the conscription. The military did not make their appearance at all in the vicinity of the disturbance, and the police patrolled their beats pretty much as formerly. Up to the hour of our going to press this morning everything was in a state of profound tranquility from the Battery to Harlem.

THE CONDITION OF THE CITY.

The Police Headquarters on Sunday.

Mulberry, near Broadway, street on Sunday presented an unusually lively appearance. A battalion of infantry in front, with picket guards on every street adjoining, and a strong police force inside of the building, could not but give the neighborhood a military aspect, rarely met with in the city. Commissioner Allen, Superintendent Kennedy, Inspectors Carpenter, Leonard and Eike were on duty, ready for any emergency, but fortunately their services were not needed during the day. The contractors in the police headquarters are being made useful in cleaning the offices and hallways, so that to-day everything will look as usual. The Superintendent's room has been converted into the headquarters of General Canby, to whom all reports are being made, and there is a constant flow of orders.

THE TWENTY-FIRST STREET ARMY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

New York, July 19, 1863.

The statement in your paper of the 18th as to the being of the proprietors of the army corner of Second and Twenty-first street is incorrect, as I have not been connected with it in any way since December 1, 1862. By meeting this in your paper you will much oblige.

W. W. MARSHALL.

Corner of Second and Twenty-second street.

Third Ward.

The report that the Western and other hotels, situated in Cortlandt street were sacked by the mob on Tuesday last, is entirely untrue, and we are pleased to say is unfounded. The hotels are now all open and doing business as usual.

Letter from Mr. James T. Brady.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

124 West Twenty-third Street, New York, July 19, 1863.

While I was in Washington, detained there by the interruption of travel between that city and Baltimore, the recent riot broke out.

Certain individuals, who spoke rather than they walked, and who they knew, suggested that the crowd would assault my residence.

I do not believe that any report of this city ever contemplated any such movement. But if they had made an attempt of the kind they would have regretted the measure, I assure you.

I know very well to whose insidious suggestions I am indebted for the expression of a threat, and address you merely for the purpose of saying to the mob, and to all men who feel inclined to take part in a mob, two things:—There is no instance in the history of mankind in which a mob or mob did not fail to win any permanent advantage.

Respectfully, Yours, James T. Brady.

THE TWENTY-FIRST STREET ARMY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

New York, July 19, 1863.

The statement in your paper of the 18th as to the being of the proprietors of the army corner of Second and Twenty-first street is incorrect, as I have not been connected with it in any way since December 1, 1862. By meeting this in your paper you will much oblige.

W. W. MARSHALL.

Corner of Second and Twenty-second street.

Third Ward.

The report that the Western and other hotels, situated in Cortlandt street were sacked by the mob on Tuesday last, is entirely untrue, and we are pleased to say is unfounded. The hotels are now all open and doing business as usual.

Letter from Mr. James T. Brady.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

124 West Twenty-third Street, New York, July 19, 1863.

While I was in Washington, detained there by the interruption of travel between that city and Baltimore, the recent riot broke out.

Certain individuals, who spoke rather than they walked, and who they knew, suggested that the crowd would assault my residence.

I do not believe that any report of this city ever contemplated any such movement. But if they had made an attempt of the kind they would have regretted the measure, I assure you.

I know very well to whose insidious suggestions I am indebted for the expression of a threat, and address you merely for the purpose of saying to the mob, and to all men who feel inclined to take part in a mob, two things:—There is no instance in the history of mankind in which a mob or mob did not fail to win any permanent advantage.

Respectfully, Yours, James T. Brady.

THE TWENTY-FIRST STREET ARMY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

New York, July 19, 1863.

The statement in your paper of the 18th as to the being of the proprietors of the army corner of Second and Twenty-first street is incorrect, as I have not been connected with it in any way since December 1, 1862. By meeting this in your paper you will much oblige.

W. W. MARSHALL.

Corner of Second and Twenty-second street.

Third Ward.

The report that the Western and other hotels, situated in Cortlandt street were sacked by the mob on Tuesday last, is entirely untrue, and we are pleased to say is unfounded. The hotels are now all open and doing business as usual.

Letter from Mr. James T. Brady.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

124 West Twenty-third Street, New York, July 19, 1863.

While I was in Washington, detained there by the interruption of travel between that city and Baltimore, the recent riot broke out.

Certain individuals, who spoke rather than they walked, and who they knew, suggested that the crowd would assault my residence.

I do not believe that any report of this city ever contemplated any such movement. But if they had made an attempt of the kind they would have regretted the measure, I assure you.

I know very well to whose insidious suggestions I am indebted for the expression of a threat, and address you merely for the purpose of saying to the mob, and to all men who feel inclined to take part in a mob, two things:—There is no instance in the history of mankind in which a mob or mob did not fail to win any permanent advantage.

Respectfully, Yours, James T. Brady.

THE TWENTY-FIRST STREET ARMY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

New York, July 19, 1863.

The statement in your paper of the 18th as to the being of the proprietors of the army corner of Second and Twenty-first street is incorrect, as I have not been connected with it in any way since December 1, 1862. By meeting this in your paper you will much oblige.

W. W. MARSHALL.

Corner of Second and Twenty-second street.

Third Ward.

The report that the Western and other hotels, situated in Cortlandt street were sacked by the mob on Tuesday last, is entirely untrue, and we are pleased to say is unfounded. The hotels are now all open and doing business as usual.

Letter from Mr. James T. Brady.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

124 West Twenty-third Street, New York, July 19, 1863.

While I was in Washington, detained there by the interruption of travel between that city and Baltimore, the recent riot broke out.

Certain individuals, who spoke rather than they walked, and who they knew, suggested that the crowd would assault my residence.

I do not believe that any report of this city ever contemplated any such movement. But if they had made an attempt of the kind they would have regretted the measure, I assure you.

I know very well to whose insidious suggestions I am indebted for the expression of a threat, and address you merely for the purpose of saying to the mob, and to all men who feel inclined to take part in a mob, two things:—There is no instance in the history of mankind in which a mob or mob did not fail to win any permanent advantage.

Respectfully, Yours, James T. Brady.

THE TWENTY-FIRST STREET ARMY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

New York, July 19, 1863.

The statement in your paper of the 18th as to the being of the proprietors of the army corner of Second and Twenty-first street is incorrect, as I have not been connected with it in any way since December 1, 1862. By meeting this in your paper you will much oblige.

W. W. MARSHALL.

Corner of Second and Twenty-second street.

Third Ward.

The report that the Western and other hotels, situated in Cortlandt street were sacked by the mob on Tuesday last, is entirely untrue, and we are pleased to say is unfounded. The hotels are now all open and doing business as usual.

Letter from Mr. James T. Brady.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

124 West Twenty-third Street, New York, July 19, 1863.

While I was in Washington, detained there by the interruption of travel between that city and Baltimore, the recent riot broke out.

Certain individuals, who spoke rather than they walked, and who they knew, suggested that the crowd would assault my residence.

I do not believe that any report of this city ever contemplated any such movement. But if they had made an attempt of the kind they would have regretted the measure, I assure you.

THE TWENTY-FIRST STREET ARMY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

New York, July 19, 1863.

The statement in your paper of the 18th as to the being of the proprietors of the army corner of Second and Twenty-first street is incorrect, as I have not been connected with it in any way since December 1, 1862. By meeting this in your paper you will much oblige.

W. W. MARSHALL.

Corner of Second and Twenty-second street.

Third Ward.

The report that the Western and other hotels, situated in Cortlandt street were sacked by the mob on Tuesday last, is entirely untrue, and we are pleased to say is unfounded. The hotels are now all open and doing business as usual.

Letter from Mr. James T. Brady.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

124 West Twenty-third Street, New York, July 19, 1863.

While I was in Washington, detained there by the interruption of travel between that city and Baltimore, the recent riot broke out.

Certain individuals, who spoke rather than they walked, and who they knew, suggested that the crowd would assault my residence.

I do not believe that any report of this city ever contemplated any such movement. But if they had made an attempt of the kind they would have regretted the measure, I assure you.

I know very well to whose insidious suggestions I am indebted for the expression of a threat, and address you merely for the purpose of saying to the mob, and to all men who feel inclined to take part in a mob, two things:—There is no instance in the history of mankind in which a mob or mob did not fail to win any permanent advantage.

Respectfully, Yours, James T. Brady.

THE TWENTY-FIRST STREET ARMY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

New York, July 19, 1863.

The statement in your paper of the 18th as to the being of the proprietors of the army corner of Second and Twenty-first street is incorrect, as I have not been connected with it in any way since December 1, 1862. By meeting this in your paper you will much oblige.

W. W. MARSHALL.

Corner of Second and Twenty-second street.

Third Ward.

The report that the Western and other hotels, situated in Cortlandt street were sacked by the mob on Tuesday last, is entirely untrue, and we are pleased to say is unfounded. The hotels are now all open and doing business as usual.

Letter from Mr. James T. Brady.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

124 West Twenty-third Street, New York, July 19, 1863.

While I was in Washington, detained there by the interruption of travel between that city and Baltimore, the recent riot broke out.

Certain individuals, who spoke rather than they walked, and who they knew, suggested that the crowd would assault my residence.

I do not believe that any report of this city ever contemplated any such movement. But if they had made an attempt of the kind they would have regretted the measure, I assure you.

I know very well to whose insidious suggestions I am indebted for the expression of a threat, and address you merely for the purpose of saying to the mob, and to all men who feel inclined to take part in a mob, two things:—There is no instance in the history of mankind in which a mob or mob did not fail to win any permanent advantage.

Respectfully, Yours, James T. Brady.

THE TWENTY-FIRST STREET ARMY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

New York, July 19, 1863.

The statement in your paper of the 18th as to the being of the proprietors of the army corner of Second and Twenty-first street is incorrect, as I have not been connected with it in any way since December 1, 1862. By meeting this in your paper you will much oblige.

W. W. MARSHALL.

Corner of Second and Twenty-second street.

Third Ward.

The report that the Western and other hotels, situated in Cortlandt street were sacked by the mob on Tuesday last, is entirely untrue, and we are pleased to say is unfounded. The hotels are now all open and doing business as usual.

Letter from Mr. James T. Brady.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

124 West Twenty-third Street, New York, July 19, 1863.

While I was in Washington, detained there by the interruption of travel between that city and Baltimore, the recent riot broke out.

Certain individuals, who spoke rather than they walked, and who they knew, suggested that the crowd would assault my residence.

I do not believe that any report of this city ever contemplated any such movement. But if they had made an attempt of the kind they would have regretted the measure, I assure you.

I know very well to whose insidious suggestions I am indebted for the expression of a threat, and address you merely for the purpose of saying to the mob, and to all men who feel inclined to take part in a mob, two things:—There is no instance in the history of mankind in which a mob or mob did not fail to win any permanent advantage.

Respectfully, Yours, James T. Brady.

THE TWENTY-FIRST STREET ARMY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

New York, July 19, 1863.

The statement in your paper of the 18th as to the being of the proprietors of the army corner of Second and Twenty-first street is incorrect, as I have not been connected with it in any way since December 1, 1862. By meeting this in your paper you will much oblige.

W. W. MARSHALL.

Corner of Second and Twenty-second street.

Third Ward.

The report that the Western and other hotels, situated in Cortlandt street were sacked by the mob on Tuesday last, is entirely untrue, and we are pleased to say is unfounded. The hotels are now all open and doing business as usual.

Letter from Mr. James T. Brady.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

124 West Twenty-third Street, New York, July 19, 1863.

While I was in Washington, detained there by the interruption of travel between that city and Baltimore, the recent riot broke out.

Certain individuals, who spoke rather than they walked, and who they knew, suggested that the crowd would assault my residence.

I do not believe that any report of this city ever contemplated any such movement. But if they had made an attempt of the kind they would have regretted the measure, I assure you.

I know very well to whose insidious suggestions I am indebted for the expression of a threat, and address you merely for the purpose of saying to the mob, and to all men who feel inclined to take part in a mob, two things:—There is no instance in the history of mankind in which a mob or mob did not fail to win any permanent advantage.

Respectfully, Yours, James T. Brady.

THE TWENTY-FIRST STREET ARMY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

New York, July 19, 1863.

The statement in your paper of the 18th as to the being of the proprietors of the army corner of Second and Twenty-first street is incorrect, as I have not been connected with it in any way since December 1, 1862. By meeting this in your paper you will much oblige.

W. W. MARSHALL.

Corner of Second and Twenty-second street.

Third Ward.

The report that the Western and other hotels, situated in Cortlandt street were sacked by the mob on Tuesday last, is entirely untrue, and we are pleased to say is unfounded. The hotels are now all open and doing business as usual.

Letter from Mr. James T. Brady.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

124 West Twenty-third Street, New York, July 19, 1863.

While I was in Washington, detained there by the interruption of travel between that city and Baltimore, the recent riot broke out.

Certain individuals, who spoke rather than they walked, and who they knew, suggested that the crowd would assault my residence.

I do not believe that any report of this city ever contemplated any such movement. But if they had made an attempt of the kind they would have regretted the measure, I assure you.

I know very well to whose insidious suggestions I am indebted for the expression of a threat, and address you merely for the purpose of saying to the mob, and to all men who feel inclined to take part in a mob, two things:—There is no instance in the history of mankind in which a mob or mob did not fail to win any permanent advantage.

Respectfully, Yours, James T. Brady.

THE TWENTY-FIRST STREET ARMY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

New York, July 19, 1863.

The statement in your paper of the 18th as to the being of the proprietors of the army corner of Second and Twenty-first street is incorrect, as I have not been connected with it in any way since December 1, 1862. By meeting this in your paper you will much oblige.

W. W. MARSHALL.

Corner of Second and Twenty-second street.

Third Ward.

The report that the Western and other hotels, situated in Cortlandt street were sacked by the mob on Tuesday last, is entirely untrue, and we are pleased to say is unfounded. The hotels are now all open and doing business as usual.